

LIASONING WORK

Liasoning is a process of communication between different departments of an organization or between different organizations. It is mainly responsible for bridging the gap between various parties or organizations to ensure smooth coordination and collaboration. This process requires an expert who can understand the rules and regulations and ensure that everything is in compliance with them.

When it comes to dealing with authorities such as government agencies, local councils, and statutory bodies, getting approval for a project plan or any other work can be quite challenging. That's where liasoning work comes in handy.
